LGBTQ Youth:
LGBTQ Curricular Laws

No updates required since March 29, 2022

LGBTQ-Inclusive Curricular Standards: These laws explicitly require the state’s curricular standards to include LGBTQ people and history, such as in subjects like history, civics, or social studies. Often these laws also require inclusive representation of other communities, such as specific communities of color, people with disabilities, or religious minorities. Visit GLSEN to learn more about the importance of inclusive curricular standards, as well as the difference between curricular standards and curriculum.

Negative Law: Parental Opt-Out of LGBTQ-Inclusive Curricula: The laws require parents to be notified in advance of any LGBTQ-inclusive curricula and allow parents to opt their children out of these classes. These laws build on existing state laws about parental notification and opt-out for sex education, but the LGBTQ opt-out laws are distinct because they require parental notification and opt-out for any LGBTQ- or sexuality-related content, regardless of whether or not the content is in the context of sex education. For more about sex education policy, including parental notification laws, see SIECUS’s research.

Negative Law: “Don’t Say Gay or Trans” Laws: These policies restrict schoolteachers and staff from discussing LGBTQ issues and people at all. In older policies (such as in LA or TX), these ban such discussion within sex education programming, but they were often intentionally written to be vague and can be misapplied by schools to limit discussion and inclusion of LGBTQ people and issues in other parts of the curriculum, school events and programs, and even extracurricular activities (e.g., incorrectly interpreted to prohibit Gay-Straight or Gender-Sexuality Alliances (GSAs)). More recent policies (such as in FL) explicitly censor such discussions throughout all school curricula, not only in sex/health education.
